Last weekend the twentieth edition of the Medieval Village was celebrated in the parish of Sant Julià de Lòria. The fair, now consolidated, has been «a resounding success», according to the minor consul of the parish, Mireia Codina, who said last Sunday that «all the activities, both those that have been going on for years and those that have been new have been such a success». One of the most attractive examples for both Laureadians and tourists has been a Ferris wheel that was in La Germandat square, right in the middle of the town, together with a carousel. These two attractions, both wooden to simulate the Middle Ages, have been one of the most successful novelties: «They have been full of people who wanted to enjoy during the three days that the fair has lasted», explained Codina, adding that «the wooden games have also had a lot of participation».

The consul also wanted to emphasize the return of the Abanderats de Tortosa, who performed several functions: «We have brought back the Abanderats, the show that was performed in 2016 and has returned this year. Each show has been very well received.» And the fact is that throughout the weekend, every time there was a function like this, the square of La Germandat was full to the brim.

Codina emphasized in addition that the weather cooperated so that the parish was full: «On Friday it seemed that the weather would be bad, but in the end, at 7:30 p.m. it stopped raining and the weather was good. We had a fantastic weekend in terms of climatology», she remarked, commenting that it was the difference with last year: «I would say that there were more people this year. Last year it rained in the middle of the fair, and that makes people stay at home. This year, however, it only rained at the beginning. The fact that there is good weather means that most peo-

In fact, the restaurateurs were full throughout the weekend for all meals: «All the restaurants were full at lunch and dinner time, also for a drink», explained the consul.

WITCHCRAFT DAYS // Mireia Codina also emphasized that «it was a good idea to link the Witchcraft Days with the Medieval Village. The tarot readers have been very successful, there were people queuing up even after they closed to see their future».

Although it rained on Friday, the weather cooperated with the fairs and tourists. ≡
